 RAY BROCK

Ray Brock is a life-long automobile enthusiast. He learned the thrill of going fast at age nine when he discovered orange crate cars, bought his first real car at age 14 and by 16 he'd discovered Drag Racing.

In the late 1950's, Ray purchased an independent repair shop just around the corner from what is now Southwestern College Higher Education Center - National City. He went on to be involved in nearly every aspect of the Automobile industry, from buying, selling, and repairing cars, to working on pit crews, building racing engines and even designing and patenting a transaxle for Off-road Racing vehicles.

These days Ray is still involved with Automobile clubs, going on road trips, and most recently decided to fund scholarships at Southwestern for the next generation of gear-heads. Thanks to Ray's generous endowment, his passions will be fueling Automotive student success in perpetuity, and the name Ray Brock will not be forgotten.

Prez Sez

Greetings, Early Ford V8ers!

As another year comes to a close, I look back at 2022 and am thankful for all the positives of the year. I am grateful for the friends old and new that I have met through the Club. I am grateful for those who have supported the Club by serving on the Board of Directors, helped putting together tours and programs for the meetings, for those that have brought refreshments to meetings and for those that have contributed to and created the Ford Fan every month. It takes everybody doing a little to make a lot happen. This Club has been going since 1969 and I believe it has more good years ahead.

If you receive the Ford Fan but haven't been to any Club activities, I encourage you to do so, at least once to check it out.

At our November Club breakfast at the Broken Yolk, we had 28 Club members attending. Another great turn-out!

Big News: The Club breakfast is back on for December! I thought folks would like a break from that get-together in the busy month of December. I was mistaken; several folks have expressed disappointment that I said, "no breakfast for you!" in December. Therefore, December's Breakfast is back on!

The Club breakfast will be Wednesday December 14th. We will meet in the parking lot at 09:00 to chat and walk into the restaurant at 09:30. If you have not been to a breakfast, try coming to one. We order off the menu, and we get separate checks. The only obligation you have, if you plan to come, is to RSVP before December 9th. RSVP to Susan at (619) 861-4630 (call or text), or email Susan at SRJV@pacbell.net). Join us if you can!

There is no Club meeting in December. The Club's Christmas/Installation luncheon on December 3rd replaces that meeting. Our Board of Directors and Officers will be sworn in at that event. If you have RSVP'd for the event, please show up at 1:00 p.m. Food will start to be served at approximately 1:30. You might want to have a late breakfast or a snack if you think you will get "Hangry" if you don't eat lunch earlier than that. Also remember that you are welcome to bring a bottle of your favorite adult beverage (beer, wine, moonshine). Only non-alcoholic beverages are provided by the caterer.

Important note: Our January Club meeting will be held at 10:00 a.m. at the Auto Museum on the 3rd Wednesday. The meetings for January, April, July, and October will all be at 10:00 a.m. This will give members that do not drive at night an opportunity to attend a Club meeting. The rest of the months' meetings will be at 7:00 p.m.

Wreaths Across America: John Davison is heading up the Club's support and purchase of wreaths to be placed on the graves of veterans. It is a worthy cause, acknowledging those that have served and protected us. You can go directly to the secure Wreaths Across America/Early Ford V-8 Club website to purchase wreaths at this address: <https://wreathscrossamerica.org/pages/155512> or you can contact John at ((619) 729-7252) for his assistance with the purchase or for more information. Do not forget, drive that old V-8!

No excuses for missing a meeting

Another breakfast. Another good time.

Friendly conversations—mostly about cars, travels and families, but it's near Halloween, so Ghosts and Goblins got some attention. Also, I tried a new thing... I held up the newest FAN featuring a history of Henry himself- and asked 5 questions about our founder. I couldn't stump Ray Brock, but it was Joe Pipher who won the prize. (a wall clock that makes Mustang sounds on the hour) . Joe knew that Henry built 9 different cars before the Model T was introduced...then sold 15 Million of them. NO ONE could answer, "What was Henry Ford's middle name?" ( He didn't have one). Hah.

Most brought cars. Mike & Lois brought a hand made flying carpet.

Wasn't just V8 Members- There were some skinny guys in sheets...

Halloween was on the menu.

Tech 101: Fuel-line hose - what you should and should not use

Most vehicle repair shops are encountering a lot of fuel-line-related issues since the introduction of ethanol into America's pump gas. Because of ethanol's effects on rubber, plastic and metals, they are finding themselves spending a lot more time fixing fuel delivery systems than they did in the days of leaded gas and carburetors.

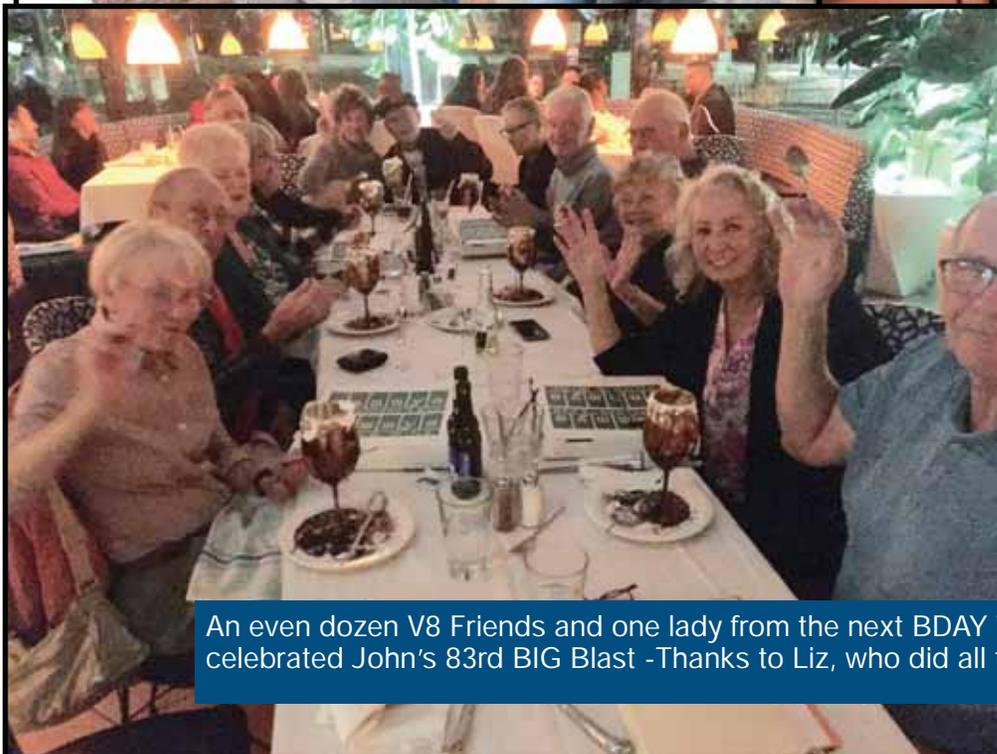

What hose do I need for fuel-injected engines?

Many late-model production cars are now using hard, black nylon tubing with special connectors to attach fuel-feed lines to the gas tank sending unit/fuel pump modules. Marine fuel hose is a different product than standard fuel hose and has to be Coast Guard approved. Small engines on your lawnmower, ATV or motorcycle use a gas-resistant vinyl tubing called Tygon. It is usually clear or transparent yellow in color and is preferred over the clear vinyl tubing you can purchase for your beer keg.. Standard rubber vacuum or heater hose should never be used in fuel applications. The hose will deteriorate from the inside out and can plug fuel filters and carburetors with rubber debris, long before it springs an external leak.

Henkel Family children running a business, Police Say.

BUSY YARD—Eleven of the 14 Henkel children work or "straw boss" on old autos in the backyard of the Henkels' Pasadena home. City officials quit protesting when they learned that car repairing was a hobby that kept the youngsters occupied and allowed them to learn a trade. Parents stand with a daughter.

Henkel Family Threatened with Police Shutdown, Wins Case.

By Dave Swaim

PASADENA, Nov. 18.—City officials told James and Alice Henkels they must "stop running a business" at their home, or face possible police action.

"Stop what business?" Mrs. Henkels asked, then provided the answers herself.

"Stop the business of rearing a family of 14 children without a delinquent in the lot?"

"Stop helping nine sons train themselves in an honorable trade, by giving them use of their own back yard—and their own autos—in lieu of high-priced technical schooling?"

DOZEN AUTOS—

It all started one day when Mrs. Henkels emerged from her house at 726 North Pasadena avenue to find city inspectors photographing a dozen old automobiles parked in her back yard. She appeared to be running an illegal junk yard, or used car lot, or both, they said.

City Prosecutor Byron Gentry heard her case and sent her to the City Hall, where Building Inspector Elliot Stevenson repeated the admonition about conducting a business in a residential zone.

"Otherwise, she said he told her, "this will be a matter for the police."

Pointing to his telephone, she urged him to call the police then and there, and be sure to talk to Sergeant Fred Lunt or Captain Hugh Morgan in the juvenile bureau.

"They will tell you how often they have commended me and my husband for our work in fighting juvenile delinquency.

"We are NOT in business. We have nine sons who have the unique hobby of collecting and rejuvenating large old autos.

"They have become expert in repairing these abandoned cars (14 such autos now stand in the Henkels' back yard, all registered in the boys' own names.)

"Our next oldest son, Tony, is a motor pool mechanic with Uncle Sam in Korea, making use of that skill he learned in his own back yard.

"Furthermore, this hobby has kept our boys busy and useful. Taking these big old autos apart and putting them together is better than running the streets, getting into trouble.

CONSTRUCTIVE—

"And it's more constructive than building hot rods to race through the streets."

Inspector Stevenson did not call the police. He told the busy mother of 14 that he would be glad to accept a letter certifying she was not engaged in any illegal business at her home.

“How could you say NO”

At the V8 Meeting Candy Green showed up with a boat load of Home Made Snacks for the break during the Club meeting. “WOW”, we said. She answered: “Yes, I made ALL these...and I’m not taking any home!” (She Knows how to take a compliment- and deliver a threat in the same sentence..)
Prez Joe put together a smooth meeting. Including a vote on officers for next year. A reminder that Christmas party tickets are dues for next year. Are due.
 The Owner of Broadway Electric, shared stories of how electrical parts for old Fords are more expensive and getting getting harder to find Reminder; John Davison is in charge of the Christmas Wreaths for Vetrans Program.

And Bill Dorrr ran a very emotional film about the Vetrans wreaths and how important that program is.

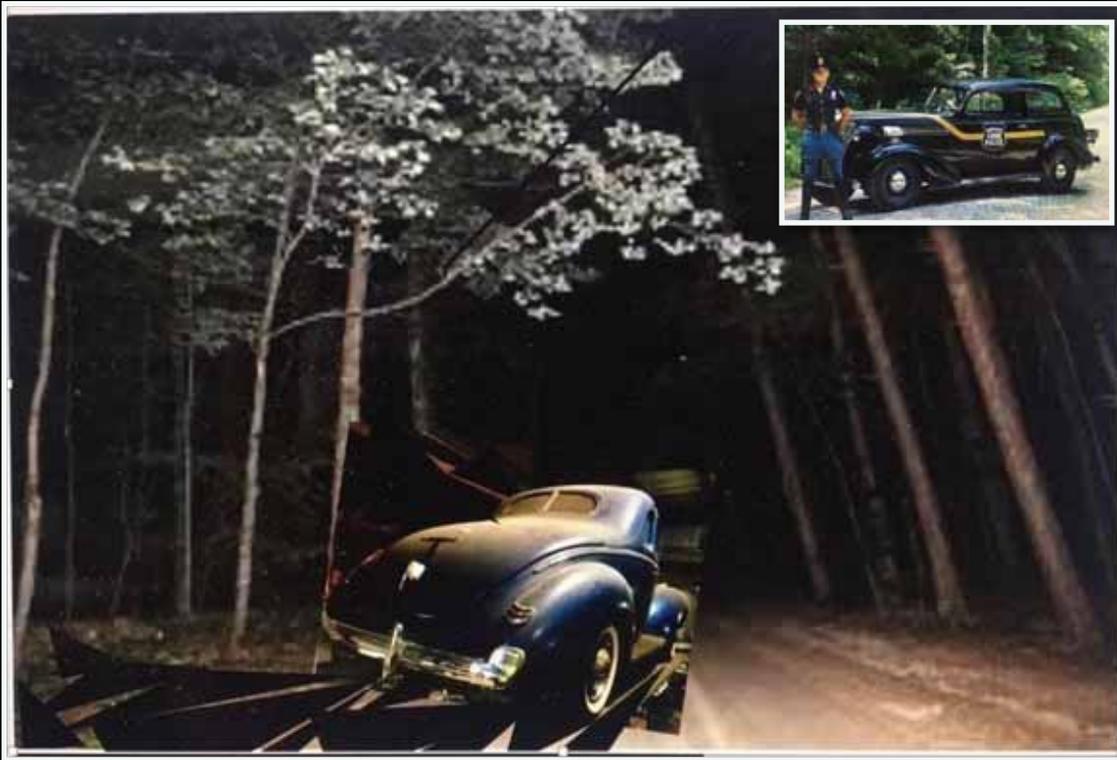

Jerry and Ray were pretty quiet

RUM-RUNNERS CHOOSE THE '40 FORD V8

The idea was fairly simple – take a car with a big trunk that looked innocent on the outside, and modify the v8 engine for greater speed, remove the floor boards, passenger and back seats to store as many cases of liquor as possible, install extra suspension springs to handle the weight, a dirt-protecting plate in front of the radiator and run the prohibited booze to customers by outsmarting or outrunning the authorities.

To elude federal Prohibition agents, sheriffs and cops on the road, these daring “runners” needed sharp driving skills to speed and maneuver along dirt, gravel, single-lane, and occasionally, paved roads after dark and mostly with their headlights turned off.

Even before Prohibition came to an end in 1933, racing these high-performance cars became a popular pastime among the “runners” in North Carolina, Virginia, Tennessee, Georgia and elsewhere in the South. They raced each other’s cars, many of them Ford models, on weekend afternoons out in the country on makeshift dirt tracks. Such were the bootlegger roots of the stock car, and what would evolve into the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing, or NASCAR, in 1947.

Booze runners looked for good mechanics who knew how to make their engines run faster and handle better than police vehicles. This became even more important in 1932, when Ford introduced its flathead V-8, with eight cylinders, a powerful car that runners started using as did police departments to keep pace.

By the nature of their illegal liquor business, veering fast along curvy, mountainous roads, runners taught themselves to be the best stock car drivers of the era and beyond. Although national Prohibition ended in 1933, production of illegal whiskey continued for years afterward to avoid taxes and regulations. Many future NASCAR drivers cut their teeth bootlegging illegal moonshine in the 1940s, such as NASCAR Hall of Famer Junior Johnson, who won his learner’s permit by running corn mash hooch before his NASCAR debut in 1955

M RUNNERS TO RACERS

Louise Smith was recruited by Big Bill France in the days before NASCAR. She finished in her first race and went on to win 38 times. Smith, the “god ol’ gal” is honored in the Motorsports Hall of Fame.

Other Ford moonshine haulers were “Reckless” Roy Hall and Marion Mad McDonald who may have invented the seat belt when he tied himself in with a heavy rope. The latch was a sharp knife.
